Question 7. (a) The Insured Perils section of a Residential Basic Form (common law provinces) or Building and/or Contents Form (Quebec) states that "You are insured against direct loss or damage caused by the following perils." Earthquake is not one of those perils.

In the course of an earthquake, the insured's house sustains substantial structural damage. The insurer invokes the doctrine of proximate cause and will not honour the claim. The insured, on his own initiative and at his own expense, then hires a contractor to repair the damage. Unfortunately, one of the workers accidentally causes a fire and the house is completely destroyed. The insurer will again not honour the claim, again for the same reason.

i) Was the insurer justified in denying the first claim? Why or why not? (4 marks)

ii) Was the insurer justified in denying the second claim? Why or why not? (6 marks)
(b) You have just sold a Homeowners Comprehensive Policy to one of your clients. However, the client is confused as to the meaning of Special Limits and Specified Perils, and whether there is a connection between the two. How would you respond to the client's questions below?
